

I drive a tractor trailer, and am out on the road for four to five weeks at a time. I listen exclusively to xm satellite radio, and have the option of tuning in to various weather/traffic reports for cities i may have to travel through. XM satellite radio is not a free service, but one i choose to pay the subscription fee for the pleasure of tuning in to whichever channels i enjoy to keep me company on the road. I never have to mess with trying to find an appropriate music or news, channel in my travels, because i have constant access to them via my satellite radio. Among the other choices i have, besides weather/traffic, are NASCAR races as they happen, and many commercial free music channels. Take a look at it. Is it real safe to be driving a vehicle, capable of hauling forty tons of freight, through a major city having to fumble with a radio dial tryng to locate a decent radio staion?? Please let us paying customers have our options of stations. I work too hard for my money to be told what I can and can't listen to on my radio. I like the option of tuning out some of the trash they put out over the public airwaves!!
